On going into commission such a ship must be furnished throughout, from the kitchen, which is as complete as that of a great city hostelry, to the captain's cabin. She carries large stocks of stationery, hardware and apothecaries' goods, and is provided with tools for all sorts of trades. Everything conceivable that may be needed for purposes of war and peace is supplied, because on the high seas no shops or factories are accessible. Usually the vessel is pro-visioned for only three months, because there is no room to stow more. The rations are purchased by the navy department and comprise such necessities as hard broad, cornmeal, catmeal, hominy, flour, sult pork, beans, peas, rice, preserved ments, butter, coffee and tea. Every man in the navy, from the last oy shipped up to the admiral, has an allowance at ab conts a day for rations, which be may draw either in food or in money. The paymaster of the ship has charge of all the provisions, which are dealt out by his "yeoman," who is in turn assisted by the jack-o'-dust. Theperson last named attends to opening the barrels and packages. Coffee and sugar are served out once in 10 days, flour every four days and meats daily. While in port fresh provisions are furnished. each man receiving one pound of fresh bread, 14 pounds of fresh meat and one pound of fresh vegetables per diem. These take the place of the ordinary rations, only tea and coffee being provided in addition. The allowance is at all times so liberal that the enlisted men cannot possibly consume the whole of it, so they take part of it in cash.-Phila-

The Typical American.

The typical Americans have all been western men, with the exception, let us say, of Washington. Washington had not had much of European culture. The qualities that made him a great commander and a great president were qualities which would have made him an equally great frontiersman. You cannot imagine Hamilton or Madison or Livingston or John Adams or the Pinckneys living tolerably on the frontier. They are not Americans in the sense in which Clay and Jackson and Lincoln are Americans. We may wish that the typical Americans of the past had had more knowledge, a more cultivated appreciation of the value of what was old and established, a juster view of foreign nations and foreign politics; that they had been more like Webster and less like Jackson, and we may hope that the typical American of the future will be wiser and better poised. But in the meantime the past is to be understood and estimated as the farts stand, and only a thoroughly sympathetic comprehension of these men, who have actually been the typical Americans, will enable us to effect that purpose. The fact that Clay rather than Webster, Jackson and not John Quincy Adams, represented the forces which were really predominant and distinctively American in our development is commentary enough on any theory that makes either of the peculiar sections of the Atlantic seaboard the principal or only theater of American history.—Forum.

AN APPEAL TO THE PEOPLE.

The Governor Issues an Address on the The following appears in the Carson

We are confronted with a very ser-More has been accomplished than lous problem which appeals to the out the enterprise and it was thoroughly understood that the several cient for this purpose. This was considered the most feasible plan, as there purpose and the next Legislature would undoubtedly reimburse the counties. The Boards of Commissionthe issuance of the warrant. About $5,000 has been raised by private subscriptions. Fur Commissioners have erected a h colorme State building at a cost of about $6,000, which is complete in every detail and filled with a magwhich, when properly set up and arranged, will be one of the most complete and attractive in the entire grounds. But right at this point the trouble commences. After making half-payment on the building, cost of lighting, plumbing, freight, salaries, wages, etc., and with our exhibit only partly in place, we find our funds entirely exhausted, our commander-in-chief about to resign because he cannot pay honestly-contracted liabilities, and the building with its entire contents liable to attachment with thousands of dollars worth of specimens owned by the State as well as private individuals. Can the people of Nevada afford to allow such a disgrace? I say, emphatically, No.

Now, what is to be done? If the counties persist in their refusal to assist, I can suggest but one plan, namely, that the members of the State Board of Agriculture, together with other men of property, severally or individually, guarantee the payment to some bank or individual who will advance money sufficient to pay the debts and complete the work.

It appears to me impossible to elect a Legislature that would not willingly make an appropriation to cover the outlay, as I believe the benefit accreing to the State cannot be over-estimated.

I have carefully examined the statates regarding the powers and duties of the State Board of Agriculture and have no doubt of their powers under the law to hold a State Fair this year or not, as they may determine. As the statute reads they shall hold an annual $15,000. fair, provided, that the State in no event shall be liable for a debt created by said Board of Agriculture, and as a fair cannot be held this year without creating such an indebtedness, the Board would be wise in a determination not to hold one. During the past two weeks I have strongly urged on some of the members of the Board the plan of lending their efforts to the Midwinter Fair and rescinding their order for the holding of a State Fair this year, arguing, as I did, that with the World's Fair, the Midwinter Fair and the State Encampment (which the law compels) our people will have spent as much time and money as they can well balance of $2,500 left of the appropriation. > A meeting of the State Board of Agriculture was held at the Bank of Nevada yesterday. Present, President W. O. H. Martin and Directors Russell. Winters, Bradley, Foley, Powning, Marzen and Phillips. Governor Colcord, State Controller Horion and Commissioner Yerington were also in attendance.

The President stated that the object of the meeting was to device procure funds to pay the expenses incurred in erecting the Nevada State building at the Midwinter Fair, and arranging the exhibit, and stated that suggestions as to the manner of proceeding were in order.

After a full discussion, in which all present participated, General Powning and Commissioner Yerington were appointed a committee to interview the several bankers of the State with a view of getting each bank to advance $250 in aid of the Nevada exhibit, the amount to be refunded from the State Treasury when the Legislature convenes. The committee was also authorized to solicit subscriptions from individuals.

It was stated that the amount contributed to date was $6,248, and that the entire cost of the building, arranging the exhibit, etc., would not exceed
